VALLEY COLLABORATIVE

Volume 10, Issue 4 News for the extended Valley Collaborative community Summer 2022

2021-2022: Quite a Year!

Dear Valley Community:

It's been quite a year – I would like to take this opportunity to thank staff for their unwavering commitment to our students and individuals we serve. The pandemic posed significant staffing challenges throughout the year but we are proud to say that Valley Collaborative is successfully crossing the finish line. This edition of the newsletter highlights the many wonderful events occurring across the Collaborative.

Administratively, Valley is very proud of its Coordinated Program Review conducted by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) as well as the ELE Coordinated Program Review conducted by the Department's Office of Language Acquisition (OLA) for receiving a flawless audit on both. As previously mentioned in our last newsletter, some of the highlights of the Coordinated Program Review were:

- DESE Parent survey results indicated that families were extremely pleased with their child's placement at Valley, quoting "they have found their home", "acceptance," "sense of safety," etc.
- Staff were very positive and appreciate the administrative support they receive in doing what is best for students.
- Staff were very committed to the mission and vision of Valley.
- From the paraprofessional in the classroom to the Executive Director and everyone in between, there was a consistent message regarding Valley's procedures and professional responsibilities and commitment to the students we educate.

VALLEY COLLABORATIVE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, DR. CHRIS A. SCOTT

- Rigorous academic curriculum across all programs was observed.
- A supportive culture for both students and staff across all programs was observed.

We thank Valley's Board of Directors, sending school districts and families for all of their ongoing support. We look forward to partnering with you to ensure Valley continues to offer excellent programming to everyone we serve/educate.

If you ever have a suggestion or need assistance, my door is always open.

My best to you,

Chris

Executive Director

Spring Has Sprung at Valley Elementary

Valley Elementary students have been celebrating the approach of summer by getting outside. “We’ve been taking advantage of the gorgeous weather,” says gym teacher Rosa DeMauro. “It really feels like summer is coming soon.”

A string of sunny days has meant plenty of opportunities for outdoor activities. Students have gone on hikes at the local nature center and have been enjoying games on the school field. In fact, demand for the field is so great that classes have been collaborating to play kick-ball and other games. Valley’s new football club, founded earlier this year by two students, has expanded its games to twice weekly thanks to popular demand.

The biggest attraction this spring, says Rosa, is bike riding. Valley Elementary has approximately a dozen bikes in a variety of sizes. The opportunity to get on a bike is also an incentive for students. If they get their work done and meet their goals, they can earn a bike ride. For many students, this is also the first opportunity they’ve had to learn to ride a bike without training wheels. “They get to take that chance and be super brave,” says Rosa. “It’s great to see.”

Valley students will also be celebrating the end-of-the-school year with the annual outdoor event known as Field Day. This year’s celebration will feature a bouncy house, a shaved ice truck, a bubble station, a dance party, lots of yard games and a graduation parade honoring all of the students. “It’s a really fun big busy day,” says Rosa. ■

For a Former Valley Student, an Opportunity to Give Back

When former Valley Elementary student Justin Randall learned about a program at Lexington High School that lets students go out to worksites, he knew just where he wanted to go. “I picked Valley,” says Justin, who will graduate from LHS in 2023. “I wanted to give back.”

Justin currently helps out at Valley three days a week, assisting in the cafeteria and in classrooms depending upon where he is needed. “I love working with the kids. It reminds me of my time at Valley as a student,” says Justin, who attended Valley Elementary a decade ago.

While Justin doesn’t yet know what he’ll be doing after he graduates from high school, he says that a future career in education is very much a possibility. “The staff members here are so great with the kids and I really like being part of that,” says Justin. ■

Transitional Middle/High School: Special Olympics School Day Games

The Transitional Middle and High school competed in the Special Olympics School Day Games in Lawrence, MA on Tuesday May 10, the first time the event was held in person since May 2019. The event, which Pete Loring and Katie Nutile helped organize, was attended by the majority of students in the two Transitional Middle/High School programs. Among the highlights of the day: a parade of all of the athletes from Valley and other participating schools.

The student athletes rotated through events including soccer, football, Bfit station, relay races, running/walking/wheelchair race, Olympic town (dancing), obstacle courses and more. Students from all classes were able to socialize and cheer on each other during the events. All students received medals and there was a pizza and ice cream donation from various community businesses for the students to enjoy before returning to school. "Overall, the event was a huge success and the students all enjoyed their day!" says Katie. Congratulations to all of the Valley Olympians! ■

For Alternative Middle/High School Students, It's the Climb

By Hannah Moriarty

It is no secret that students accessing Alternative programming get to participate in some pretty cool opportunities. For example, in my seven years with the Collaborative I have enjoyed adventures such as white water rafting, sea kayaking, and questing at Boda Borg. But no Friday field trip compares to the adventures of the Outdoor Ed Club. While I've been playing laser tag, the Outdoor Ed Club has been hiking mountains—like real deal mountains. Maybe you've heard of Mount Washington? Yeah, the Outdoor Ed Club climbed it back in the beginning of April, in full winter conditions. Needless to say, when I got the invite to hike the Franconia Ridge with the club I was an immediate yes. After all, Franconia Ridge is world famous and dubbed a hike that "...will blow your mind" by National Geographic.

A well-oiled machine

It was obvious from the get go that the Outdoor Ed Club is a well-oiled machine fueled by excitement and leadership at all levels. This leadership doesn't just come from Glen Costello and Bobby Nimblett, the two staff leads, but from the students as well. Kevin Surette, a junior in the Psi Site 2 program, was in charge of double checking each participant's gear and helping them pack correctly. Aidan Butze, a senior in the Psi Site 2/Culinary program, was working hard behind the scenes shopping for and preparing all the food that would be eaten on the trip. Kevin and Aidan have been active participants in the Outdoor Ed Club since they were both freshmen. It was clear that they had earned the trust of staff members through years

Franconia Ridge bound

After everyone packed their bags, snack packs and dinner, the group of middle and high school students as well as three staff members climbed into the vans and were off to hike Franconia Ridge. The nervous excitement was palpable the entire way up to the trailhead. It was beginning to rain but that could not dampen our excitement as we began the ascent to the night's accommodations at the AMC Greenleaf Hut. Kevin and Aidan led the charge uphill which truly shows the level of student leadership fostered by the Outdoor Ed Club.

As the trail quickly gained elevation, students and staff alike could be heard encouraging each other. Jakob Jones, a Junior in the Psi Site 2 program, yelled out, "Good job, Philly Cheesesteak!", as Philip Hoffman, an 8th grader, made it up a particularly steep section of the trail. It was around this time that Glen pointed out that five out of the seven students started with Valley as members of the Alternative Middle School. High school students encouraging and taking the middle school students under their wing is a direct reflection of the culture created and fostered by the entire first floor, says Glen. "The impacts of the program are starting to be seen."

Temporary home

Approximately three hours, three miles, and 2500 feet of elevation gain later, we arrived at the Greenleaf Hut. It seemed to come out of nowhere, illuminated by our headlamps. Once inside, we were assigned our rooms and bunks were assigned and happily changed into dry and warm clothes. After that, dinner was enjoyed around one long table and stories of past excursions were shared. The laughs quickly turned into yawns, and everyone hit the hay early in anticipation of a 3:00 am wake up in order to reach the top of Mount Lafayette, the first of three mountains on the ridge, in time to watch the sunrise.

Off through the fog

Early the next morning, those that weren't awakened by a quiet alarm in one of the students' rooms were greeted by the sweet sounds of the Moana soundtrack. We packed our bags, filled water bottles and ate bagels in a blur.

Then we set off on the final mile up to the summit of Mount Lafayette, the sixth tallest mountain in New Hampshire. The fog was dense and each headlamp cast a distinct beam of light in front of the wearer.

Dante Dragone, a Junior in the Psi Site 2 program, had the group laughing when he compared his beam to the Bat Signal. As we entered the Alpine Zone and climbed above the treeline, it became obvious that the fog was not going to lift in time to see the sunrise on top of Mount Lafayette. After a quick summit picture, the group continued on to the rest of the ridge in order to get out of the wind at the summit. Halfway to the next summit on top of Mount Lincoln, the sun began to peak out just enough to burn off some of the clouds. What emerged was a magnificent view of the surrounding mountains and landscape. Cheers rang out from the entire group as the anticipation of this view made finally seeing it even sweeter.

Summit revealed

The group continued the trek to Mount Lincoln. On the way, adjustments were made to people's packs and Kevin and Aidan carried extra to help alleviate some weight making it easier for some members of the group to hike up and over the various inclines along the ridge. At the top of Mount Lincoln, the group enjoyed expansive views of the entire ridgeline. It was even possible to see the Greenleaf Hut which helped Ireland Spencer, an eighth grader and the first female middle school student to be invited on an Outdoor Ed Club overnight, put into perspective just how far the group had hiked so far.

Final summit ahead

Eventually the group bid farewell to Mount Lincoln and hiked onward to the final summit of the day, Little Haystack. Little Haystack's views continued to delight. After a final snack break, the group started the descent. The trail was fairly steep making progress slow moving. Every now and then the person in the front would call out "Hiker!" to warn the rest of the group to move over for the hiker climbing up. Students enjoyed dunking their heads into the cold, fresh, mountain runoff water. Bobby Gaye, a junior in the Vocational program, remarked that he had been looking forward to dunking his head since the day before, however, he was surprised by just how cold the water was. After several more water crossings that required hopping from rock to rock surrounded by a rushing current, the group finally made it back to the trailhead parking lot.

THE VIEW FROM THE SUMMIT OF MT. LAFAYETTE.

It is clear that the Outdoor Ed Club is a success in multiple ways. First, the club consistently and safely hikes some of the most daunting trails in the White Mountains with students who have a wide range of personalities and are from a variety of backgrounds and experiences. Second, it creates opportunities for student leadership and the mentoring of younger students. Because of the strong sense of leadership, teamwork and excitement demonstrated by staff and students alike, the Outdoor Ed Club is able to take it one step further, providing students the opportunity to create a positive culture based on teamwork and leadership. ■

After 27 Years, Joe Hangs Up His Apron

Stop by Joe's Bistro these days and you'll notice something missing. Joe Reilly, who has run Valley's restaurant, culinary training facility and catering operation for nearly three decades decided to take off his chef's apron this spring. "I turned sixty and decided that it was time," says Joe.

Joe began managing the restaurant when it was still housed on Brick Kiln Road in Chelmsford. But his connection with Valley, then known as MSEC, dated even further back. Before he joined the Valley family, Joe managed the cafeteria at MITRE in Bedford. Among the workers he supervised was a crew of individuals with disabilities from MSEC's adult program. Joe hit it off with them, and when he got the invite to come and work at the school, he jumped at the opportunity. "I never looked back," says Joe. "The school just kept growing and gave me the chance to grow with them."

Charlie 8

Donald Bugden, who participates in Valley's Today and Tomorrow program, was one of the adults working at MITRE when Joe arrived. "We got along immediately," recalls Donald, who worked in one of the facility's three kitchens, cleaning up, putting things away, and alerting Joe when it was time to order more supplies. "Joe is a lot of fun." The two quickly formed a bond that would last for decades. When Donald would swing by Joe's Bistro for breakfast before heading out to work, he'd greet his former boss with a code that only they understood: 'Charlie 8.'

Explains Joe: "Because it was a secure facility, we had to call somebody to open the door when we needed to take the trash out or let a delivery person in. Our door was C8 which in military lingo is Charlie 8."

Joe's experience at MITRE was his first time working with individuals with disabilities, a population that he would grow to love. He also demonstrated a knack for seeing the potential in his new co-workers. "This is a select group of workers that can be a challenge to manage, but Joe had a gift," says Bill Pedreira, who started with Valley's adult program in 2014 after a 30-year career in the pharmaceutical industry. "He would assess what the kids' capabilities are, match them to what they could do, and then give them more responsibility when he thought they were ready," says Bill.

More than a restaurant

As Valley's dining operation steadily expanded, the number of students and adults involved in food prep, cooking and catering expanded too. In addition to being a fully functioning restaurant that, until the pandemic, was open to the public, Joe's Bistro also provided catering to the Billerica Housing Authority, and cooked for special events, including an annual school-wide Thanksgiving dinner. Pre-pandemic, Joe oversaw a crew of six to eight workers, including students from the Transitional Middle/High School program and individuals and adults from Valley's adult work program. "They were all doing different tasks," says Bill, who assisted Joe in the front of the house and with the catering program. "You'd have some folks out grocery shopping, another group prepping meals, others washing dishes."

For the workers, Joe's Bistro has long provided an invaluable opportunity to gain experience in an actual restaurant, skills they can take on to paid employment elsewhere. For workers in the surrounding industrial park for whom the Bistro was a lunch destination pre-pandemic, Joe's scratch cooking was the draw. Says Bill: "Where else could you get a hot meal for $3 and tax?"

Saying Farewell to Joe

A good boss

JJ Jasilewicz is one of countless workers who Joe mentored in his time at Valley. These days, JJ makes the cookies, stocks the beverage coolers, makes pizza and operates the fryer on the days when burgers are served for lunch. Joe taught him how to do all of those things, says JJ. In addition to these hands-on skills, Joe also coached JJ in the behind-the-scenes work of knowing when it's time to order more supplies, and monitoring expiration dates. Perhaps most importantly, Joe taught him to be responsible, professional and to do a good job, says JJ, all while making working fun. "He told jokes and made us laugh. He was a good boss and treated me well. I miss him," says JJ.

JJ isn't the only one who feels that way. Sarah D'Arezzo originally joined the Bistro crew as part of the catering operation seven years ago and is now the assistant manager of the kitchen. "Joe was so on top of things, making sure that everybody was fed. He'd come in here at the crack of dawn to get everything ready. He lived and breathed this place," says Sarah. She describes Joe's role in the kitchen as akin to choreography. Whether they were running low on a favorite dish or a line of students and staff was spilling out into the hallway, everybody had their part to play, says Sarah. "Joe never had to say anything because we all knew what we had to do."

A special place

This spring, things at the Bistro have slowly been returning to normal, though the restaurant is no longer open to the public. For Joe, who has been officially retired since March, his new normal means getting used to a life that no longer requires getting up at the crack of dawn. While he's working part-time at a local deli and butcher shop, he's planning on spending more time on the Cape and with his extended family.

Still, Joe admits that moving on from a job and a place that has meant so much for him hasn't been easy. "I miss everybody," says Joe. "I had a lot of bonds with a lot of very special people." On the occasion of his official departure from Valley, staff members presented him with mementos to mark his 27 years and 1 month at the helm of the Bistro. "I'll hold onto those forever," says Joe. "It was a great experience. I saw people grow and go onto bigger and better things. I was proud to be a part of that." ■

From everyone in the extended Valley community, we'll miss you Joe! Don't be a stranger...

Adult Program

As the summer approaches, the Adult Program looks to continue the consistent growth back toward full normalcy. With the pandemic affecting so many aspects of programming, the individuals continue to show their resilience and personify the hard-working culture the Adult Program community is known for. With a number of new staff on board, the Adult Services Program will look to take advantage of the strong relationships with community partners to create new and interesting employment and volunteer prospects.

Paul Center for Learning and Recreation (Camp Paul)

The individuals are getting the camp ground ready for the summer season. There is much work to be done, from seeding flower beds to repairing and painting picnic tables!

Merrimack Valley Food Bank

Valley has long partnered with Lowell's Merrimack Valley Food Bank. Individuals deliver meals to people in need throughout the community. During the month of April, the Today and Tomorrow Program ran a food drive collecting donations for the Food Bank. As usual, the Adult Services Community came together and showed their caring and generosity and were able to donate a huge amount of supplies for the Food Bank. The Individuals' compassion was once again on display! ■

Valley Travelers Hit the Road for Five-Day Trip to Washington DC

The Valley travelers are back on the road again! On Monday, May 16, a group of 18 individuals from our transitional high school, alternative high school, and adult program, along with 5 staff members, hopped on a bus to make their way to Washington, D.C. After a nine hour trip, the Valley travelers wasted no time and started their sightseeing right away. The first stop of the 5-day trip was the National Archives to see the U.S. Constitution! From there, our tour guide Barb Bowman led the group on a solemn and respectful tour through the World War II, Vietnam Veterans, Lincoln, and Korean War Memorials. In an extra special moment, one of our travelers found a relative memorialized at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

On day two, the Valley travelers traveled back in time and spent the day at Mount Vernon, the historic home of George Washington. They learned fun facts about the ways and life of Mount Vernon's inhabitants by enjoying the sights of the estate, gardens, farm, outbuildings, including the blacksmith shop, smokehouse and spinning house, and the tombs of George and Martha Washington. Did you know that the mansion's exterior looks like stone but is actually yellow pine siding? After a pleasant trip to the past, the Valley travelers enjoyed a cruise down the Potomac River. The Valley travelers have always enjoyed a good cruise!

On day three, the Valley travelers took another trip in their "time machine" and visited Colonial Williamsburg. The group was immersed into colonial life and enjoyed learning about the different trades through seeing the brickyard, blacksmith, wigmaker and foundry.

DEPARTURE TIME! ERIK FANNON, LIA METRAKAS, OWEN EDWARDS, SANDY GAMACHE, MARY ALICE JACKSON, SCOTT MORIN, TRACEY SPINALE, ROBERT RICHARDS, ANTHONY ANGLEMYER, ALYSSA LAWLER, TONY BERRY, KEN BONNELL, MELAINA CHAPUT, STACEY FRANCIS, DYLAN TRAN, JOE VENSUS, SHANNON HUTCHINSON, NORA BAILEY, CASSIDY DUFAULT, NATHANIEL STEIGERWALD, SAMANTHA WOJTOWICZ, LUCAS COSTAIN

The Valley travelers took delight in seeing the ornate decor of the governor's palace. Their Colonial Williamsburg day ended with a fright, as they enjoyed hearing spooky ghost stories featuring characters of the time period.

Day four was a highlight for many! The Valley travelers started their day by accepting the mission of becoming undercover spies at the International Spy Museum. They particularly loved the interactive activities throughout the museum. It was a great way to learn about espionage! After completing their mission, it was back to the bus to head to Maryland to cheer on the Baltimore Orioles against the New York Yankees, at Camden Yards.

The game was a blast! When asked what his favorite part of the trip was so far? Nate Steigerwald of the Today & Tomorrow program responded, “The trip has been fun & I really enjoyed the game today!” The Baltimore Orioles won 9 to 6 against the Yankees! Ball game treats of hot dogs and ice cream made for a sweet victory!

On day five, the Valley travelers bid a bittersweet goodbye after ending their trip with viewing the White House and visiting Ford’s Theater, the site of President Abraham Lincoln’s assassination. This once in a lifetime experience provided the travelers with the opportunity to learn and explore U.S. history through the sights and sounds of Washington, D.C. Better still were the social connections made, friendships forged, and memories that will last a lifetime.

Nora Bailey of Chelmsford, who took her first long distance trip away from home, first school trip, and first trip to Washington, D.C. returned to school the following Monday wearing her new sweatshirt that read “FBI Washington, DC.” Her favorite memory was the Spy Museum. “The tour guide challenged us to climb through a vent. They said, ‘If I can hear you, you won’t make a very good spy,’” recalled Nora. The result? “No one heard me!”

When speaking with staff, Anthony Anglemyer of the Today and Tomorrow program recalled, “Overall, it was a good time. I enjoyed the interactions at the Spy museum and only wished we had more time to complete them all. Also, the staff did a nice job of keeping everyone together and safe.” ■

Reunited and It Feels So Good!

Longtime friends Maggie King and Mark Fitts reunited for a surprise lunch this week after about six months apart. The pair, affectionately nicknamed “M&M,” have been friends for about a decade now. They picked up right where they left off and caught up on some big life events including Mark’s new independent job at a book store in Lowell and Maggie’s upcoming Disney vacation with her family.

Maggie, who loves to read, was thrilled to hear about Mark’s new position, and the two shared various book series they enjoy and would recommend. They also spent some time reminiscing about their time at Valley over the years including working at the Billerica Town Hall and volunteering on the Chelmsford High School campus—Maggie’s alma mater! Their last stop for the afternoon was logging onto Valley’s remote “Zoom lunch” to catch up with more staff and friends at home. Mark remarked how glad he was to see one of his dearest friends and hoped they can remain close pals who get together more often. ■

Valley Collaborative Awards Corner

Every year Valley Collaborative recognizes outstanding staff and students and community partners for their service. Please join us in congratulating this year's recipients:

Nicole Noska, Principal, Transitional Programming, Valley Middle/Transitional High School, is the recipient of the Dr. Anthony Bent Leadership Award.

Alex Romano, senior, Valley Alternative High School, is the recipient of the Student of the Year award. Explains Principal Julie Fielding: "Alex has a curiosity about learning that is contagious to his peers and teachers. He has made honor roll all four quarters his senior year. Since starting at Valley, his emotional maturity has flourished. Over the last two years Alex participated in the Outdoor Education Club and has worked on his leadership skills. Alex is interested in pursuing a career in Engineering."

Bristol Myers Squibb/Jones Lang LaSalle is the recipient of the Community Leader Award in recognition of our gratitude for their support of Valley Collaborative.

Congratulations to all!
